This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Preface.

This volume reviews briefly the work of volume one and proceeds to the mastery of more advanced expressions.

The general plan of the teaching and the practice is the same as before; the original divisions of the subject being retained.

Each chromatic and rhythmic expression is fully explained as presented, and the songs and part exercises are specially adapted to the previous teaching.

The songs which appear at the close of the volume are for the most part common to the series, and are intended for use on occasions when all grades may be expected to take part. Some of these songs will necessarily be sung by rote in this grade.

Each volume of this course of study from the second onward presents certain fundamental features as review; the intention being to enable a teacher who has not used the books from the beginning to become somewhat familiar with the plan of the work as a whole. This will explain the simplicity of certain exercises in the advanced volumes. The fact has been constantly in mind, that in taking up a new difficulty no form of presentation can be too simple.

The authors desire to thank those who have assisted in testing the text of this book. Thanks are also gratefully extended to the following publishers and authors for the use of copyrighted material: G. P. Putnam's Sons and the author (poem on page 18); G. Schirmer (song on page 25); The Century Company and the author (poem on page 35); and to Charles Scribner's Sons.

Directions.

The teaching presented in this volume is clearly explained in Chart Series D. Practice from the chart should, consequently, precede each lesson from the book.

Children learn to sing by singing, therefore as little time as possible should be spent on the technical part of the subject.

A few essential facts are given as foot-notes to prepare the pupils for a more complete study later.

It is well to teach children to read music at sight, but the desire for sight singing should not interfere with the careful study and practice of songs and exercises with reference to the tone, the phrasing, the application of words to music, and most of all, the cultivation of the true musical spirit.

The tone should always be soft, flexible, and entirely free from harsh nasal sounds. The movement should be free, with marked, but not excessive accents. The exercise should be spirited but short. Children should not sing more than fifteen minutes at a time.

The position should be erect, natural, and easy.

The teacher should have the proper quality of tone clearly in mind, and when this quality is produced, she may feel sure that the children are not injuring the voice.

In writing on the subject of "Style," Mathilde de C. Marchesi says, "There are but two of them in the world, the good and the bad; exactly so there exist only two singing methods, the efficient and the deficient."

Note. Various meters are illustrated in each lesson, the effect of which should be carefully brought out by observing the accent which always falls on the first beat of the measure.

In four- and six-part measures, however, a secondary accent falls on the third and fourth beats, respectively.

The effect of four-part measure is illustrated by the word compromising. Allow the children to pronounce the word as though counting (with accent) one, two, three, four — *com'*pro *mis'*ing; then alternate the word with the counting, and the proper relation of the accents becomes evident.

♪ Sixteenth Note. ♪ equals ♬ $\frac{3}{8}$ Meter Signature. This means that each full measure must contain the value of three eighth notes, ♫ or ♩ ♪ or ♩. ⌢ A Tie.

Too great care cannot be taken with the part exercises. If the harmony be impure when the parts are sung together, it will be necessary to continue the study of each part separately, before trying to give them together. Careless and imperfect part singing should be avoided at any cost of time and patience.

$\frac{4}{4}$ METER SIGNATURE. This means that each full measure must contain the value of four quarter notes. 𝄽 QUARTER REST. ♪ EIGHTH NOTE. 𝄾 EIGHTH REST. (Exercise 13 is to illustrate the effect of the rest which in this case simply shortens the note before it.) No change in beating is necessary. Sing a note to each beat. In the first measure (Ex. 13) sing each note strongly, holding it till the next is taken. In the second measure make the notes short and slightly separated, but do not count the rests or try to estimate their value. The effect of these rests may also be expressed by placing dots under the notes. Thus, ♩. ♪, and ♪𝄾 ♪𝄾 have similar effects. ♯ SHARP.

The exercises beginning with No. 17, introduce the chief rhythmic feature of this volume, — the unevenly divided beat. A full treatment of this rhythm is given in the chart which accompanies this book, by means of which the teacher is urged to make the children familiar with the movement before attempting these exercises.

Exercises 25–27 are to illustrate the effect of the short note at the beginning of an exercise. There should be no difficulty here. Do not begin to beat till the second measure is begun, giving the first note in the exercise freely, without accent, and take the second note as the real beginning of the exercise.

* A sharp (♯) placed before a note is called an accidental, and the tone which it indicates is called a chromatic tone, because formerly such tones were shown in a different color. The word chromatic means colored.

Exercises.

The use of dictation exercises should cultivate a more careful attention to tone relations, and greater acuteness of hearing. The attempt to write what the pupil hears will necessitate a knowledge of musical signs and expression.

The children should copy the staff, and place the clef as the teacher directs. Having told the children where to place Do, the teacher may sing the exercises very slowly, with the syllable loo, while the children write the notes. Then the correct representation may be placed before them, errors corrected, and new trials made.

An octave consists of two tones represented in notes, thus:
We see that one of these notes is lower on the staff than the other
We speak of the first of these notes as being lower than the other

As we sing up the scale we speak of each tone as higher than the one before it, and in going down we speak of each succeeding tone as lower than the one before it. To express this difference in tones we use the word pitch. In singing up the scale, we should say re has a higher pitch than do, or that do has a lower pitch than re.

Sharps, flats, or naturals, placed on a staff degree affect the pitch which it represents. ✶Thus  in 1, fa is changed by the ♯ to fi, a tone having a higher pitch. The effect of the sharp does not extend beyond the bar, however, so the next note (in 2) on the same staff degree is fa.

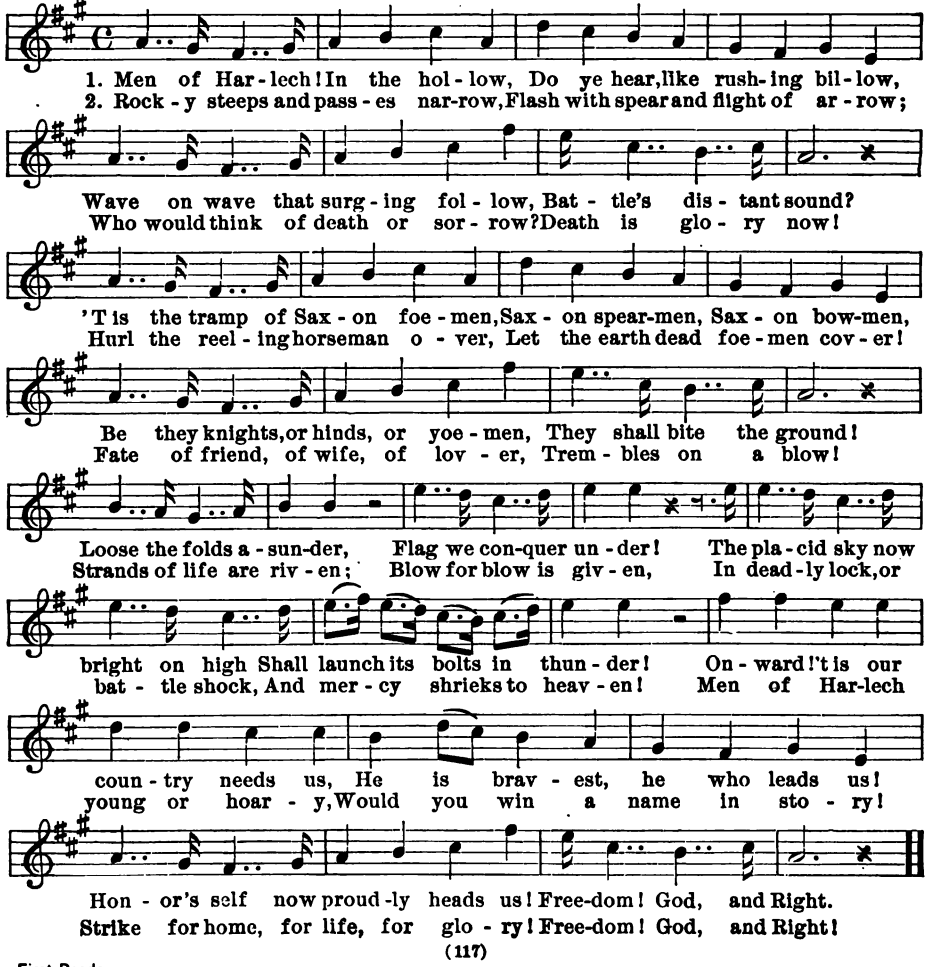
SECTION II.

PATRIOTIC AND DEVOTIONAL SONGS.

No. 58. March of the Men of Harlech.

Words by WILLIAM DUTHIE. Welsh National Song.



1. Men of Har-lech! In the hol-low, Do ye hear, like rush-ing bil-low,
2. Rock-y steeps and pass-es nar-row, Flash with spear and flight of ar-row;
Wave on wave that surg-ing fol-low, Bat-tle's dis-tant sound?
Who would think of death or sor-row? Death is glo-ry now!
'T is the tramp of Sax-on foe-men, Sax-on spear-men, Sax-on bow-men,
Hurl the reel-ing horseman o-ver, Let the earth dead foe-men cov-er!
Be they knights, or hinds, or yoe-men, They shall bite the ground!
Fate of friend, of wife, of lov-er, Trem-bles on a blow!
Loose the folds a-sun-der, Flag we con-quer un-der! The pla-cid sky now Strands of life are riv-en; Blow for blow is giv-en, In dead-ly lock, or bright on high Shall launch its bolts in thun-der! On-ward! 't is our bat-tle shock, And mer-cy shrieks to heav-en! Men of Har-lech coun-try needs us, He is brav-est, he who leads us!
young or hoar-y, Would you win a name in sto-ry!
Hon-or's self now proud-ly heads us! Free-dom! God, and Right.
Strike for home, for life, for glo-ry! Free-dom! God, and Right!

The Natural Course

In Music for Public Schools

By

Frederic H. Ripley and Thomas Tapper

This course consist of a carefully prepared series of Music Books and Charts, reasonable in price, and designed to cover the whole graded course in Primary and Grammar Schools. The plan contemplates the constant use of charts at first independent of the books and afterwards as a systematic preparation for the lessons to be learned from day to day in the music readers.

The Charts and the Readers are very closely related to each other, and their interdependence and correlation will be seen from the following outline:

1st year in Music—Chart Series A.
2d year in Music—Chart Series B } . . The Music Primer.
3d year in Music—Chart Series C }
4th year in Music—Chart Series D . . Music Reader, No. 1.
5th year in Music—Chart Series E . . Music Reader, No. 2.
6th year in Music—Chart Series F . . Music Reader, No. 3.
7th year in Music—Chart Series G . . Music Reader, No. 4.
8th year in Music— . . . . . Music Reader, No. 5.
